*Co-education is inspiring,
supportive, exciting,
fun, realistic and,
above all, natural.*

Why Co-ed?

We strongly believe that co-education allows students to appreciate the different perspectives boys and girls bring to the community and successfully experience the sheer complexity of gender, particularly during the formative adolescent years.

In academic terms, boys and girls attain similar merits, indicating that each gender is enhanced by the presence of the other. Our students are comfortable with who they are and have a healthy, positive and respectful attitude towards each other.

Not only do girls and boys learn differently, but so does every student, regardless of their gender. Knowing each student as a learner is one of the foundations here at St Leo's.

Socialisation is undeniably one of the essential outcomes of schooling, and it is more naturally and fully achieved within a co-education environment. The social development of students, including the formation of appropriate values and attitudes, is a prerequisite for the ongoing wellbeing of our society.

Co-education prepares students for the world after school where 'real life' is rarely gender separated. Co-education is the best environment for the future.

Our world is a 'co-ed' type of world - what better place to continue this education and develop these relationships, particularly during their formative years of adolescence?

A real sense of community exists at St Leo's and our newly refurbished Chapel is the spiritual heart, where a weekly Mass is also held which students have the option to attend.

Preparing Students for the Future – Technology and much more

We equip our students with the skills and attitudes to be future leaders in their fields.

Technology is an integral part of daily learning, with individual student iPads or MacBooks and other learning technologies serving as important tools in developing critical thinking, creativity, collaboration and communication skills. Our experience has found that technology-enabled teaching and learning allows for more active engagement, it allows teaching to meet the student at their particular point of learning, and students are encouraged to advance their skills in a safe environment.

Our Learning Den is a custom-built online learning platform on which students can record and track their progress in a range of areas, giving them learning ownership and a digital portfolio to take with them when they leave. We have an interdisciplinary approach to Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM), which students apply to make connections between school, community, work and the global enterprise. Students also have the opportunity to participate in competitive programs such as VEX Robotics.

Our innovative Pathways Program works with students and their families to navigate life beyond school, developing industry and higher education partnerships, and shaping new offerings and approaches to learning at St Leo's.

Overall, St Leo's is focused on developing transferrable deep learning skills that will equip all our students for the future by creating lifelong learners able to adapt to and challenge a world being constantly reshaped through advancing technology.
